

WOODWARD FAVORS COMMISSION FORM

Willing to Resign Own Position, He Says, in Roasting People in Charge of the City as "Political Incompetents."

Declaring that he has become thoroughly disgusted with the municipal waste which he has observed during the two years of his term, and charging that the barter and traffic for political prestige is being carried on at a frightful sacrifice to Atlanta and the taxpayers of the city, Mayor James G. Woodward Thursday announced his advocacy of commission government.

At the end of the life of the 1914 council and on the eve of the expiration of his first term, the mayor said that he would favor a clean sweep of the city hall.

He charged that municipal inefficiency and political greed has already undermined the fundamentals of administrative government in Atlanta, and said that unless a change is made soon the already tottering government is certain to fall.

Willing to Resign.
"To prove that I am honest in what I say, I will be sworn," said the mayor, "I will be sworn to give up the $4,000 a year job as mayor to give the city an opportunity of starting all over," says the mayor.

"I want to see a clean sweep, I want Atlanta to take her affairs out of the hands of political incompetents, and place the government in the hands of men who are capable of gathering up the lost motion and placing the city back on a basis of efficiency."

Mayor Woodward has already started his fight, and already have the opponents of commission government taken steps to fight off any movement for commission government, or any other change in the city charter. He will ultimately result in wiping out the jobs which the mayor has been created to pay off political debts.

In a recent statement Mayor Woodward declared that with efficient men at the head of the government of Atlanta, the city can save hundreds of thousands of dollars belonging to the taxpayers each year.

Will Open Commission Fight.
When the 1915 council is introduced into office, Mayor Woodward proposes to start his commission government fight.

He will have introduced a resolution providing for the appointment of a committee of twenty-five reputable citizens who are known to be dyed-in-the-wool commission government advocates, also a committee of like number, also qualified, but who are dyed-in-the-wool administrative government advocates, to draft two new charters for the city.

One charter is to embrace all the principles of commission government. The other is to embrace all the principles of a modern administrative government charter.

Both charters are to be submitted to the voters after the next general election in July, and they are to be the first form of government they prefer.

Threatens the Recall.
"And if the city council refuses to allow the people to vote on the question," adds the mayor, "then I urge that the recall be applied."

"The time has come when radical changes should be made in the method of transacting the city's business, because, as I said, it was a mayor before, but since a gang of little politicians, with no other ambition than to squander their own selfish desires, can run the city's business, I think the time has come to call a halt somewhere."

"Atlanta can progress no longer under the present system. Why, then, do we not have a council which would run the city's business in the same line as the city's business is run, if they did so they would be squandering their own money, but when they allow the reckless and unscrupulous of the people's money and give no return in the way of city progress, then it is a matter of concern for every property owner and taxpayer in the city."

"I have never been a very great advocate of bonds, but I had my mind in view of the improvements needed by the school department, waterworks, sewers and other necessities of the city government, that I would not oppose bonds of a reasonable amount, but no man, regardless of the extent of view for the welfare of the city, can be reasonably expected to approve bonds in the face of the atrocious conditions existing today."

Annals Chamber Election.
Mayor Woodward was asked what particular act of council he referred to.

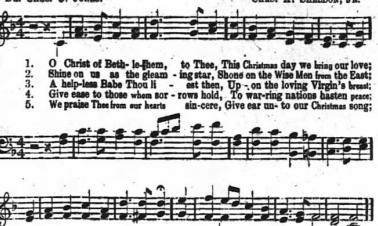

"I mean the trickery employed in the election of Aldine Chambers," he said, "not so much the man that I have objection to as it is the detestable methods of political trickery resorted to to accomplish the election of Chambers. He is a man who would do anything of that type of citizen which meant much to the city, and he has been elected to belong to my clique, and I was decided to put another of the clique in his place, and the trickery of the city government was exposed. Captain Hope was outwitted, and even employed to advantage, except through a system such as Atlanta is cursed with."

A CHRISTMAS HYMN

One of the interesting features of the many Christmas services which will be held in Atlanta today will be the singing by Trinity church choir of a Christmas hymn composed by Charles W. Sheldon, Jr., of Atlanta, Ga., 1914.

Trinity Christmas Hymn--Atlanta, Ga., 1914.
(Dedicated to Trinity Church and Choir.)

O Christ Of Bethlehem.
CHAS. W. SHELDON, JR.

With all our souls we wish to be, And all ways do like those above.
Let us sing music from a far, Breathe on us sweet goodwill and peace.
Now King of Kings Thou art to men, For Thou dost bring the joy and rest.
Gladness to those who have sorrow, And love and peace in the breast.
Grant this to us, O Christ of Bethlehem, Her song and melody pro-long, A-men.

All Darktown Gathers to Hear Trial of Judge Nash Broyles On Charge of Upholding Law

The common talk on Decatur street, during the morning hours of Christmas Eve, along the following lines:
"Rufus, is yo' gwine down ter p'lice court dis afternoon ter hear Judge Broyles trial by dat new recorder?"
"Tansah, honey, don't yo' see I look at my collar an' tie. I see I'd be down ter p'lice court."

At 1:30 o'clock, the hour set for the trial of Judge Nash R. Broyles, for sixteen years police recorder of the city of Atlanta, now of the court of appeals, the gallery of police court presented a daily spectacle. There were all kinds of "darktown" citizens, wearing their Sunday-meeting clothes, on hand to hear the trial of Judge Broyles, who had sentenced many of them to the penitentiary, and fired others many times during his career as police recorder.

Overpowered Settled.
As "Judge Broyles," in the custody of a court attaché, was escorted to the defendant's stand, to face trial before a bench upon which he himself had sat hundreds of times, a crowd and a friend of the Atlanta police department, who had sentenced many of them to the penitentiary, and fired others many times during his career as police recorder.

As "Judge Broyles," in the custody of a court attaché, was escorted to the defendant's stand, to face trial before a bench upon which he himself had sat hundreds of times, a crowd and a friend of the Atlanta police department, who had sentenced many of them to the penitentiary, and fired others many times during his career as police recorder.

Aided by the Police.
In his cross-examination the defendant alleged that he had not been for the police it would have been utterly impossible for him to have committed the offenses that he was accused of, especially the alleged offenses of "running down" the law and direct and upholding the good name of Atlanta.

"Wherefore," said Judge Broyles, "as defendant throw myself upon the mercy of the court."

They couldn't wait until the end of the year for the resignation because they knew that the new council would elect the man they wanted. "What I can't understand is why a man with any self-respect would let himself be so trifled with, when the city expect to get efficient service from men whose ambition do not arise to the dignity of the place."

"It is such things that cause the people to lose confidence in government," said Judge Broyles. "The man who is elected to the city council has just got to assert themselves and demand a dollar value for every dollar they pay into the city."

"And what is more, they are not, for I don't believe the city council is going to refuse to let the people elect the man they want. The issue at the polls."

"I will not see the issue squarely settled. The committees which are to draft the charters should be only the very best forms of the two types, one which retains the very best of the people. Only, let the people elect the man they want, and they have the right to voice their sentiments at the polls."

"In the suggestions I have made, I do not strike any individual, but at the city government as a whole. When I say that there should be a clean sweep of the city hall I mean that the sweeping should be started in the mayor's office, and everyone swept out into the street. There are good, efficient men connected with the city government. They are honest and loyal and patriotic, but they are working under a system which renders them very inefficient. There are members of council who are working always in the best interest of the city, but they cannot do it. I know that these men would like to see a change for the good of the city."

That it is very doubtful whether Allen state the horse, which belonged to his cousin, or merely rode it without permission.

Here is the letter which lets Allen home for Christmas:

"Dear Governor: My husband has been away from me over fifteen months. He has been in the hands of the law just that long. I have been reduced to $100.00 December 10, this year. I have been working for his release for over a year and have spent all the money we have. We are in very poor circumstances, everything we

"Yes, I have some documents in my pocket, valuable to me, but of no use to you. I wish you would not bother them. Very well, I am much obliged to you. Good night."

"Good night," said Mr. Clay. The burglar left the room, and presently for the hallway came. "Merry Christmas!"

Some time later the front door slammed.

ill met, and before going into the council chamber to conduct the elections he conferred with Aldermen Nutting, Armistead and Maddox.

Mayor Woodward Arrives.
Twenty minutes before the election by council, Mayor Woodward arrived in the council chamber.

Alderman Nutting was on his feet immediately after the elections of the water board members had been dispensed with. In nominating Mr. Chambers, Alderman Nutting said he felt a great pleasure in so doing, and he paid a high tribute to Mr. Chambers when he said that he knew of no other man in the city who was better qualified for the place.

The mayor replied:
"I am glad to see a split effort," said Mayor Woodward.

Alderman Thomson took occasion to eulogize Mr. Chambers when he explained his vote. He said that he had not taken anyone else thought more than he thought Mr. Chambers was worth enough to be mayor, when he said against Mr. Woodward.
